

AmcoGiffen announces new appointments to support growth and structure

June 28, 2021

AmcoGiffen has made three key appointments recently to support growth and structure as it prepares for building back better.

Bryan Kennedy has joined the team as HS2 Operations Director. Bryan previously worked for Knights Brown Construction and Galliford Try and has widespread civil engineering experience. Bryan will be responsible for strategy and delivery of AmcoGiffen's HS2 offering which includes providing specialist technical partnering services in relation to civil engineering interventions, for example where the new line meets or crosses waterways or other railways.

Peter Ritchie joins as Regional Managing Director for Scotland after several successful years working for Balfour Beatty, latterly as Framework Director for the Scape civil engineering framework. Peter will be leading operations north of the border, building on the current high performing frameworks in both rail and non-rail markets.

And finally, Gareth Armishaw has been appointed to Operations Director as part of the Wales, Western and South team. Gareth was previously Head of Regional Projects for Balfour Beatty and will be responsible for leading the Western Region.

John Booth, AmcoGiffen Managing Director, said: “We’re delighted to welcome Bryan, Peter and Gareth to AmcoGiffen enhancing our team in what is set to be an exciting and transformational time for us and our industry.”
