

Bidvest Noonan announces new Transport Sector Business Unit

December 14, 2021

Bidvest Noonan has announced plans to create a new specialist business unit focusing on the transport sector in Great Britain.

The business has an extensive client portfolio and decades of experience supporting many of the UK's largest bus and rail operators.

Bidvest Noonan aims to cement its leadership position in the sector and establish a strong platform for its continued growth and development.

Colin Marshall, a transport sector expert who previously served on the leadership team of Cordant Services, has been named Managing Director for the new business unit.

Operating nationwide across the UK, Bidvest Noonan estimates that it supports over 1.5 billion journeys annually. The services it provides to clients in the transport sector include cleaning, security, shunting, refuelling, sanitizing and many more.

Commenting on the announcement, Colin Marshall said: “I am delighted that we are continuing to invest in our transport sector business, and I am honoured to lead this business as Managing Director.

“We have built the expertise, resources and infrastructure we need to provide world-class value and support to our clients. With the development of our new transport sector business unit, we have everything we need to continue growing and improving for clients.”

Charlotte Marshall, CEO of Bidvest Noonan in Great Britain, said: “Bidvest Noonan has an impressive portfolio of clients in the transport sector. Establishing a sector-dedicated business unit will enable us to improve our performance for them, innovate faster and accelerate our growth.”
