

DWG Infraco joins forces with Orion Eco Solutions to deliver a highly effective microbial decontamination service in response to the global outbreak of the coronavirus crisis

April 20, 2020

Established business, DWG Infraco is widely recognised as specialist suppliers and installers of life extension materials and geotechnical engineering services for rail, airports, highways, and industrial infrastructure and utilities. Following an enquiry by a major transport provider to combat the growing urgency to reduce the spread of coronavirus, DWG Infraco has adapted its traditional business operations to directly address this global concern.

In response to the enquiry, DWG Infraco approached Orion Eco Solutions who manufacture a highly effective microbial fluid which is proven to be effective against coronavirus. As a result, tests and trials were rolled out to establish whether DWG Infraco resin pumping equipment could be adapted to dispense microbial fluid instead of resin.

With trials undertaken successfully, the two companies will now work together to deliver a single-step solution capable of delivering high volumes of the microbial solution quickly, efficiently and, importantly, safely. This full-service offering provided by DWG Infracore and Orion Eco Solutions means that spaces both large and small ranging from warehouses, transport hubs and stadiums, to schools, offices and restaurants can benefit from a safe and highly effective microbial decontamination solution.

Mike Andrews, Principal Engineer at DWG Infracore said: “We are delighted to be collaborating with Orion Eco Solution on this venture and doing something that will make a big difference in helping to combat the spread of this terrible virus. Being able to adapt and diversify in this way is something we are extremely proud of during this very challenging period.”

Tim Jevons, Director, Orion Eco Solutions commenting on the joint venture said: “Working with DWG Infracore on this project to deliver something so important during this crisis is an exceptional achievement for both organisations. Combining our knowledge and resources means that we are able to deliver a service that will safely destroy and help prevent the spread of coronavirus in a wide variety of environments.”

Further information about the service offered by DWG Infracore and Orion Eco Solutions can be found at <https://www.dwguk.com/microbial>