“We are really excited about this event. Yes it’s virtual, but it’s a world away from conference and webinars and its very focus is on the type of conversations you may have at major exhibitions or industry dinners,” reports Cat Appleby, Membership Manager. “Short sharp discussions on a fantastically visual platform that allows users to very easily and quickly navigate around, with the added bonus of not having to manage the awkwardness of tapping someone on the shoulder.

“Quinn Infrastructure return as event sponsor for this continuation of the Rail Forum infrastructure events programme and we thank them for their ongoing support.”

Rail Forum Midlands members can register for free and have up to three places at the event. For non-members, there is a maximum of one place per company and there is a small charge.
