

Last call for registrations as biggest ever RIN hits London tomorrow

March 7, 2023

More than 100 exhibitors and 600 visitors will descend upon London tomorrow as the biggest ever Rail Infrastructure Networking (RIN) event kicks off at 9.30am.

RIN is an established event on the rail calendar since its inception more than six years ago – and since its return after COVID has experienced huge footfall as some of the biggest decision makers in the rail infrastructure industry congregate under one roof for half a day of networking and developing new business.

Registration for free visitor passes is still open today ahead of the event, but those interested in attending are encouraged to book now to avoid disappointment.

A full exhibitor list can be viewed here.

Keven Parker is Client Director for Jobson James Rail, the company behind the foundation, development and organisation of RIN. He said: “We are delighted to host what will be the biggest RIN since we started in Crewe more than six years ago.

“RIN is about being a force for good – an event to stimulate business growth opportunities and bring together some of the most innovative infrastructure businesses in the industry to share ideas, develop partnerships and learn.

“It is not too late to visit RIN for free and registration takes just a minute. We implore anyone working in the rail infrastructure industry to do so and see what RIN has to offer.”

RIN London takes place at the Business Design Centre near the Angel tube station in Islington on Thursday 9th March from 9:30am to 1:30pm.

To register as a visitor, click here.