October 22, 2021

One of the industry's most popular infrastructure networking events is urging businesses to secure their stands for its return to Yorkshire in November, as the last few stands remain available.

Rail Infrastructure Networking will return to York Racecourse on Thursday November 18, welcoming an expected 100 exhibitors from across the infrastructure sector, with hundreds more visitors joining to network and do business in person following a long break in live events.

As the event draws closers, organisations have continued to secure their places, with Trackwork, Premier Rail and Trojan Rail recently confirming their attendance in York.

Trackwork is a highly respected provider of construction and engineering services to the rail network., while Premier Rail is a UK leader in providing and installing RRAP's & level crossings, and Trojan Rail offers pioneering cable management systems to the UK rail industry.

RIN event organiser and Rail Director at Jobson James Rail Keven Parker says the York edition is now 75% booked with interest high for the final remaining stands:

“We have seen a huge interest in the return of Rail Infrastructure Networking to Yorkshire, with bookings being taken on a daily basis and anticipation building for Thursday November 18.

“For organisations operating on UK rail infrastructure, RIN offers the perfect setting to promote your services and speak with rail industry professionals from across the country. Many visitors in attendance are senior decision-makers within their organisations looking to discuss innovations and opportunities to improve and develop their businesses.

Keven added: “We expect our final stand bookings to be taken soon so I’d urge anyone that is interested in attending to contact us now and book their space before it disappears. We’re excited to be coming back to York Racecourse and look forward to reconnecting with the industry on our return.”
