

Latest Rail Director springs into action

March 28, 2022

In the coming days more than 2,200 rail industry leaders and subscribers will be receiving the latest edition of the Rail Director magazine.

The March edition of the monthly track-to-train magazine features a host of exclusive interviews, including the chief executive of the West Midlands Combined Authority Laura Shoaf CBE, the new chair of Transport for the North Lord McLoughlin, and UKTram's managing director James Hammett.

Take a look below at this month's front cover, along with a teaser of what is in store for those who have signed up to receive their own copy of the magazine.

This edition also features a look behind the scenes of London's new Elizabeth line, Network Rail's David Castle talking about the technology being developed to help preserve Victorian railway tunnels, and a chat with the new president of Scottish Engineering Aine Finlayson.

Rail Director's Danny Longhorn said: "With the hard work done for the March edition, we can now look forward to people's reactions when the magazine arrives at homes.

"I've thoroughly enjoyed putting the latest magazine together and, with a wide range of stories from those who make the railway the success it is, I hope that readers will enjoy it as much.

"As always, a huge thank you to everyone who has played their part in the magazine, from those who have taken time out of their busy schedules to speak with the team, to those using the magazine to showcase their products and services."

Christian Wiles, who leads the RBD Publications advertising sales team, said: "The time has come that we know so many people look forward to – the arrival of the latest magazine. I can't wait to hear everyone's feedback.

"For the Rail Director team, our attention turns to the April magazine, with spaces to appear in it filling up quickly. If you'd like to feature, don't hang around, get in touch and we'll help you to get your product or service to the decision makers of the rail industry."
