

London Northwestern Railway to increase capacity as reopening of society continues

May 7, 2021

Rail operator London Northwestern Railway (LNR) is introducing dozens of new and longer services as further societal restrictions ease.

The new timetable, which comes into effect on Sunday 16 May, focuses on introducing additional trains on routes to and from London Euston.

Among the changes will be a 50 per cent increase in capacity for more than 30 services on the West Coast Main Line, which will step up from eight carriages to 12.

Lawrence Bowman, customer experience director for LNR, said:

“Our new timetable has been specifically designed to step up capacity on the services and routes which need it most as more restrictions lift.

“We look forward to welcoming our customers back to the railway but we must be realistic that even with this extra capacity, social distancing will not be possible on the busiest services.

“This is why it is important for passengers to plan ahead and travel at quieter times if they can to help maximise the space available.”

Among the changes passengers returning to the railway may notice are enhanced cleaning regimes and one-way systems at some larger stations.
