Now into its 67th year, the Awards have almost 2,000 entries every year, covering nearly 50 countries and a reach of over seven million employees. The programme recognises organisations' commitment to continuous improvement in the prevention of accidents and ill health at work, looking at entrants' overarching health and safety management systems, including practices such as leadership and workforce involvement.

While most awards are non-competitive – recognising individual organisations' achievements – competitive awards are presented in 20 industry sectors and for specialist areas of health and safety management.

John Mills, Head of QHSE, Nomad Digital said: “This is a great accomplishment for Nomad to achieve again. We continue to progress our systems and processes, but most importantly our people and our culture of safety across all regions that we operate in. We have colleagues in 13 countries working in a variety of environments which all present different challenges and hazards; awards like RoSPA allow us to acknowledge that we have a system that can support every single employee in making choices to keep themselves and others safe no matter their working environment. Every day is a new challenge, I’d like to thank everyone across Nomad for playing their own part in achieving this award once again.”

Julia Small, RoSPA’s Achievements Director, said: “Accidents at work and work-related ill health don’t just have huge financial implications or cause major disruption – they significantly impact an individual’s quality of life. That’s why good safety performance deserves to be recognised and rewarded.

“We are thrilled that Nomad Digital has won a RoSPA Award and would like to congratulate them on showing an unwavering commitment to keeping their employees, clients and customers safe from accidental harm and injury.”

Sponsored by Croner-i, the RoSPA Awards scheme is the longest-running of its kind in the UK, and receives entries from organisations across the globe, making it one of the most sought-after achievement awards for the health and safety industry.
