

RIN calls out for final registration as its North West event nears

May 2, 2019

Rail Infrastructure Networking (RIN) is encouraging businesses not to miss out on significant business networking opportunities by registering as a visitor for free at its Wigan event on Thursday 9th May 2019.

RIN has continued to experience growth since it launched just a couple of years ago. The events, which are jointly organised by rail insurance brokers Jobson James Rail and the Railway Industry Association, are designed to bring smaller businesses together to meet with each other and larger contractors in order to stimulate business development opportunities.

The event is renowned for its personable atmosphere, which has led to a host of businesses registering for a stand at the event again this year.

Hosted over various UK locations throughout the year, RIN creates a personable atmosphere where rail professionals are given the time to develop positive relationships with others. Major investment is due to take place in the North West over the next few years, so this is an opportunity to speak with businesses ahead of an exciting time in rail.

The event joint organiser and lead sponsor, Keven Parker, Director at Jobson James Rail, said: “The RIN team is proud to continue to provide a low-cost event, which ultimately benefits the businesspeople that attend. The events allow those who attend time to speak to the people they need to and develop new partnerships. Essentially, the only cost to a business is that person’s time, so the return on investment just by attending is significant.

“We’re encouraging anybody who wishes to attend to register their free visitor space before the event on Thursday, which takes just a couple of minutes on the RIN website. Visitors will receive a badge to print at home before they attend.”

RIN events are priced to cover the operating costs and are not profit-orientated to keep exhibitor fees low. Jobson James Rail is a specialist insurance solutions provider acting for over 220 railway companies across the UK. RIN will also return to Derby in September and York in November 2019.

Its first Rolling Stock event, “Rolling Stock Networking” will be on Thursday 11th July at the Derby Arena and the event is 90% booked up for exhibitors already. Please visit www.rsnevents.co.uk . The lead sponsor is Jobson James Rail.
