

The latest Rail Director is on its way to industry leaders and subscribers

November 22, 2021

The latest edition of our track-to-train industry magazine will be dropping at the doors of industry leaders and subscribers in the coming days.

More than 2,200 people will get to read Rail Director first, having signed up for a hard copy of the magazine. To apply for your own personal copy, click here.

This month features a whole host of high-profile interviews, including HS1 Chief Executive Officer Dyan Crowther, Midland Connect's Head of Rail Karen Heppenstall and the man behind the incredible Rail to Refuge scheme Darren O'Brien.

We've also spoken to Anthea Sully, Chief Executive of White Ribbon UK, praising the rail industry's efforts ahead of White Ribbon Day on Thursday, 25 November.

David McLoughlin, Chief Executive of the Business Daily Group, said: "I'm delighted the latest magazine is on its way and I hope people enjoy it as much as they have previous editions."

“This month’s edition really highlights the fantastic impact the industry has on people, from Dyan talking about sustainability through to Darren and Anthea highlighting the impact on those escaping domestic abuse.

“As always, the quality of our magazine is only as good as those sharing their stories and promoting their products and services, which we have in abundance.”

The latest edition also features Rail Freight Group's Maggie Simpson talking about the Freight Council, Lucy Prior on her role as the Chair of the Railway Industry Association's SME Group, and Paul Lewin – the General Manager at the Ffestiniog and Welsh Highland Railways – talking about £3.1 million of funding.

Chris Wiles, who leads the RBD Publications team, said: "We're delighted with the latest Rail Director and can't wait for you all to see it. With November's magazine on its way, attention now turns to December's edition, with spaces already filling up quickly.

"Appearing in Rail Director is really making a huge difference to organisations that feature, putting their products and services in front of the decision makers and leaders in the rail industry."
