November 25, 2021

Turner & Townsend has signed a two-year contract to provide project controls services for the Network Rail Crewe programme, which is set to connect the existing rail network with HS2 in the future.

Turner & Townsend said it will work as part of an integrated team to help ensure that effective controls and processes are established and integrated across the programme.

The Crewe programme aims to allow Network Rail to improve services, resilience and capacity at the station, while preparing for connectivity with HS2 that will benefit all associated routes and locations.

Craig Owens, Director and regional rail sector lead for Turner & Townsend said: “Crewe is a key junction on the existing rail network and will provide strategically important connectivity to HS2.

“The programme provides a major opportunity to improve capacity for passengers as well as delivering economic and environmental benefits that support the Government’s levelling up agenda and the push for net zero carbon emissions by 2050.

“The appointment reflects the strength of our long-standing relationship with Network Rail and ability to deliver successful outcomes across a critical and transformational infrastructure programme for the UK.”
