Xrail Group has opened a new office extension in Manchester which aims to strengthen the company's partnerships with its existing and future clients in the North.

Due to an increased demand in its services this expansion positions Xrail Group as the key partner in the signalling market in the UK.

The new office extension is in Manchester at 111 Piccadilly, located just 100m from Piccadilly train station and Metrolink tram station and a short walk from the bus interchange in Piccadilly Gardens.

Munir Patel, CEO of Xrail Group, said: "The decision to expand and open an office in Manchester was a logical step in our business growth strategy.

"Here at Xrail we believe that it's critical that we meet clients where they live to service them most effectively."
